

WENDY J. WOLF, M.D., M.P.H.

Over her distinguished career, Dr. Wendy J. Wolf has provided leadership and expertise in health philanthropy, national health policy and public health, leadership development, and the practice of high quality clinical medicine, research and education.

From 2001 to 2016, Dr. Wolf served as the founding President and CEO of the Maine Health Access Foundation (MeHAF), which is the state's largest health philanthropy dedicated to promoting access to quality health care, especially for the uninsured and underserved. Under her leadership, Dr. Wolf led the foundation's long term strategic planning, program development and public policy initiatives, and worked with the Board of Trustees to ensure MeHAF developed and modeled best practices in foundation governance, transparency and public accountability. During Dr. Wolf's tenure, MeHAF evolved into a nationally recognized leader in advancing state health reform and expanding access through the strategic use of public policy, advocacy and program initiatives such as spearheading the development of the most comprehensive statewide electronic health information exchanges in the country; improving care delivery through a ten-year initiative to integrate primary care with behavioral health services, and developing Maine's comprehensive enroll207 outreach and enrollment campaign for the Health Insurance Marketplace.

After graduating from Denison University, Dr. Wolf obtained her MD degree from Ohio State. She completed her pediatric and pediatric cardiology subspecialty training at Children's Hospital of Los Angeles. As a professor of pediatrics at the University of Texas health system, she advanced high quality specialty care delivery, guided student and resident physician education, and performed basic and applied research. After obtaining her MPH degree from the Harvard School of Public Health in 1998, Dr. Wolf served as a Senior Advisor to the Administrators of the Health Resources and Services Administration as well as the Agency for Healthcare Research and Quality within the U.S. Department of Health and Human Services. For her work on national policy for the new State Children's Health Insurance Program, she received the Secretarial Award for Distinguished Service and the HRSA Administrator's Award for Outstanding Service.

Dr. Wolf is a health policy expert and published physician researcher. She has received numerous awards, including being named one of the "50 people shaping Maine" by Maine magazine, and receiving a "20 in 20" statewide health care leadership award from the Maine Health Management Coalition. She previously served on the Board of Grantmakers in Health. Dr. Wolf currently lives in Boothbay Harbor, Maine where she serves as an elected town Selectwoman.